

Keeping Toddlers Busy!

Toddlers love putting objects inside containers. This is a developmental skill. They learn that things still exist when they can't see them and they can put things in and take things out. Their hand eye coordination and finger dexterity improves! This all can be done with inexpensive homemade objects.

New and interesting objects can be used to stimulate curiosity and lead them to develop new skills!

Play can be extended to include conversations and activities that include information about colours and numbers, all the while increasing the amount and range of new words they will be learning during the activity.
